THE less credit the world gives to the editor of the Journal's assertions the more desperately he makes them. Foreigners did n't vote. It is no longer worth while to assert that they did; and what was the reason, do you suppose, according to the Journal. Just this: "word was passed that the voting should cease, and that resort should be had to blood." Now when it was believed that every vote was important for the State ticket, in which the deepest interest was felt, who gave the word that the voting should cease, does any one suppose when, according to the editor of the Journal, there was no reason for it. Voting that day was the way to win, not fighting. In the First Ward the Democrats had at least six or seven hundred votes to poll, and yet the word was passed that the voting should cease. Now we should like to know if there be a man this side of purgatory that believes such a statement. Is it not enough to discredit any statement the author might make?

The editor of the Journal improves in his description of the peace and order of the day. It was "Sabbath day quietude" when the work of "slaughter" was commenced by foreigners. His own published ex parte certificates disprove his assertion. They would condemn his party before any impartial jury. The polls were taken by ruffians, yelling for Sam; gangs of the same class paraded the streets, insulting and beating every foreigner they met. All Louisville knows this; hundreds of ruffians know it. It was provided for, and understood beforehand. Know-Nothing's all over the city can be found who advised foreigners, beforehand, not to go to the polls, in order to keep them out of trouble, so well were events foreseen. The editor of the Journal threatened them beforehand, as we have shown from his own columns.

But why did not the authorities prevent these scenes? They might have done so, the editor of the Journal confesses. "Very possible peace might have been kept," says the editor, "or at any rate, the first assassins arrested by the officers of the law, if the city authorities had known beforehand the fearful extent of Sag-Nicht preparations for blood." A more unfounded calamity never was panned. There were no such preparations made, and the public know it.

But the editor can't get off with that excuse. He informed the authorities of this city that foreigners were raving like savage beasts. He told his readers that foreign rebels were imported. He was informed by a policeman that so many Irish were never seen before in the city. Then, the city authorities were not uninformed. He gave them the fullest and most emphatic warnings. Then why were they not prepared? Certainly the editor of the Journal was as worthy of credit then as he is now, and if his party believed his representations, they had the most distinct notice that could be given.

But it is not worth while to tell the people of Louisville that the city authorities did not anticipate that the polls would be taken by Know-Nothing bullies, and that foreigners would be insulted, beaten, and abused; that the city would be under mob law. They had a taste of these things before, and could not have anticipated less. The outgivings and threats of the Journal were sufficient without previous experience. They might have prevented what occurred. There was no difficulty about it. There was no determination that there should be either fairness or peace. Every antecedent of the day on the part of the Know-Nothings showed it. And there is none now. The columns of the Journal, its justification of the infamous mob, and its whole tone, point to a repetition of the same scenes. The editor is not at all ashamed of what occurred. It is, according to him, just what is to be expected in any American community.

Similar deeds were done by the same party in Baltimore, New Orleans, and Cincinnati. In the two latter cities the voters were not kept from the polls, and the ruffians and scoundrels resorted to breaking the ballot-boxes. Is it indeed true that such things, and nothing better, are to be expected in any American community? If so, American communities want a master, who will teach them with lead and cold steel how to behave them selves. The race of republicans is about run, and ought to end.

We hold the assertion a slander. There is a public opinion that will grind the authors of such deeds and their apologists to powder. We are not to tolerate the reign of ruffians and jail-birds, and set them up as samples of Americans, and their rule as American rule. Something better is expected, and something better will be had. We shall have the polls protected by honorable, law-abiding men, not by outspurings of jails, work-houses, and penitentiaries. The past year has witnessed some startling developments in this republican country—elections carried by mob law—elections followed by funerals—elections that carry in their train robberies, burnings, and desolations, and miseries, shocking apologies for such scenes; yes, verily, and a half promise of their repetition.

We have got the editor of the Journal out at last in a lame account of his silence about things at Washington. He innocent confesses that he did not know what to say, and therefore said nothing. Well, that is just what we expected, but it's not a pretty spectacle that the organ of the great American party has nothing to say in such an emergency! He does, however, let out what he would do; he would vote for anything for Speaker, in order to organize the House, and have the appropriations to carry on the government. He would vote for an advocate for the Missouri compromise, or a Sag-Nicht, for that purpose. His readers can see that he is ready to excuse the brethren if they vote for Banks or some other Abolitionist. The apology is put out in advance, for the editor foresees what is coming.

We have, nothing to advise; we only approve what is done. Our folks know what to do; they got their instructions beforehand. They do not expect to save the Union by organizing such a body as is now at Washington. Better for the Union if it never met. Nothing for the peace of the country is expected of it. It is a mischievous sectional body. Let the factions organize it, and be responsible for their own deeds.

But can't the organ inform us why the House does not organize? Can't Banks give the signs and the grips? Hasn't he taken the third degree? Can't he give the signal of distress; or will not the brethren, sworn as they are, obey it?

If nothing can be done, why not send on for Bloat, Whisky Barrel & Co., with brass knuckles, sling shots, &c., to drive the Sag-Nichts of Congress from the House? It is very gratifying to us that we have a phalanx in Congress that don't need advice. They are not sworn either; have no signs, grips, and no signal of distress. They vote right just as naturally as they eat their dinners. Hooray for the seventy-four!

We publish from the St. Louis Republican a full account of the doings in Kansas. A correspondent of the St. Louis Democrat makes light of the whole business. He is at Lawrence, and finds everybody quietly pursuing his business; nobody intending to kill somebody; the people not tampering at all to keep a fuse generally; the editor of the Herald of Freedom making a mess of himself generally by his tirades, that no one needs. The difficulty, it seems, did not originate in politics, but about land claims.

No Speaker Yet.

We publish this morning, under the telegraphic head, several additional ballottings; but it will be seen that there is yet no election.

On the 29th ballot, Banks, 107; Richardson, 76; Fuller, 28; Zolliecoff, 8; scattering votes, 225. Necessary to a choice, 114; and thus the House adjourned.

See the advertisement of breastplate lost. The finder will do well by leaving it at this office.

From Pittsburg to the mouth of the Ohio river is 977 miles, with an aggregate fall of 425 feet.

For quotations of hogs—number killed, in pens, &c., see commercial review published elsewhere in our columns.

The Ohio and Pennsylvania's Railroad Company is about to bridge the Allegheny river at Pittsburg.

The second free lecture of Dr. Banning takes place to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock, in the Christian Church, corner of Fourth and Walms streets. Mechanism and Philosophy of the vital organs.

Reading on First Page.

Upon our first page to-day may be found a continuation of "The Knocker," a most exciting story; also, several items of news from our evening edition of yesterday.

Salt creek bridge, on the New Albany and Salem railroad, will be in condition to pass the trains by Wednesday. Many hogs intended for market that have been delayed, we suppose will be rushed along in double quick timer.

The Daily Democrat is supplied at fifty cents per month to the country, or at the exceedingly low price of $5.00 per annum, payable always in advance.

Clubs of ten dollars to one post office $40, or only $4 each when in a club of ten subscribers.

COAL AND SALT LOST IN THE LATE GALE AT JEFFERSONVILLE, IND.—Two barges, containing about 15,000 bushels of coal, were sunk at Jeffersonville Sunday last, and both will prove a total loss. Value of coal and barges about $800, also, a flatboat with 1,100 barrels of salt.

Miss. Wm. Winans, wife of John Winans, of the Bowery Theatre, New York, and mother of the Misses Kate and Susan Denin, died in Memphis on the 31st ult., aged forty years. The Misses Denin, who had an engagement in Memphis, left for New York with the remains of their mother.

The shortest day in the year is also hours and four minutes in length. This will occur on the 18th inst., and the length of the day will vary a fraction of a minute for nine days from this time, increasing a single minute on the 27th of December, when the day is nine hours five minutes in length.

Few Days.—Our readers will see, by the advertisements of H. S. Moore, assignee, in another column, that he is selling off Miller & Gould's fine stock of fancy goods, notions, holiday gifts, &c., at cost for a few more days. Also, that he desires all outstanding bills settled up, and will remit the stand on Fourth street, between Market and Jefferson.

At Dayton, on Thursday, a verdict was rendered by the Court of Common Pleas against David Clark, the County Treasurer, for the sum of $2,700, being the amount with interest, taken from the Dayton Branch of the State Bank, for taxes, by Clark, as Treasurer, under the Crowbar Law. The suit was against Clark, as an individual trespasser, and not as Treasurer of the county.

To Advertisers.

All transient advertisements in the Democrat are payable in advance, according to our published terms, and henceforth payment must be made in advance, or the advertisements will not appear.

DISSOLUTION.—It will be seen by reference to advertising columns that the firm of Anderson & Fisher has dissolved.—Mr. Fisher retiring from the concern.

Mr. John M. Anderson will continue the business at the old stand.

We are placed in possession of the Safety Fund and Bank Note Detector, a periodical published monthly at Indianapolis, by the Safety Fund and Bank Note Telegraph Association. It is gotten up in fine style, but of the merit of its contents, we are still unable to judge.

LOUISIANA.—OFFICIAL.—The Baton Rouge Advocate publishes the official returns of every parish in the State. The vote for Governor is as follows: Wickliffe (Dem.) 22,422; Derbyign (K. N.) 19,415—majority for Wickliffe 3,004. Between Moise and Hunt, the opposing candidates for Attorney General, the vote stands: Moise 22,237; Hunt 19,834—majority for Moise 2,374. Randall Hunt ran highest on the Know-Nothing ticket.

Banking and Exchange Office.

We direct publication to the card of Messrs. J. M. Pinckney & Co. These gentlemen have just commenced business on Main street, opposite the Bank of Kentucky, and are prepared to buy and sell exchanges on all points in the United States, and to transact a general banking and exchange business.

We gladly welcome to our city all associations to business interests, and none more than to those who contribute to its capital.

Messrs. Editors: We would be gratified to hear that Short Surtex, Esq., would consent to give an exhibition of the extraordinary performances of his dog "Toney." If he responds to the call so unanimously made by his "Many Friends," and the citizens generally, we are certain of an overwhelming house to witness them; and if the proceeds are for the benefit of the poor, the thing will be pawsitively. In no event would it reflect unfavorably upon his responsibility, as he is earnestly solicited by his friends.

THE THEATRE.—There was a respectable, but not so full attendance at the theatre last night as should have been—fully as large a number, however, as could then be expected. The greater part of the audience was from the neighborhood of the theatre, and the citizens generally, we are certain of an overwhelming house to witness them; and if the proceeds are for the benefit of the poor, the thing will be pawsitively. In no event would it reflect unfavorably upon his responsibility, as he is earnestly solicited by his friends.
